Twelve Million Lost, Twenty-Four Blocks Razed In Astoria Conflagration

By Associated Press
Astoria, Ore.—Astoria Saturday surveyed its losses from the $12,000,000 fire which Friday razed 24 blocks of the city's business section.

Summarized the situation was as follows:

Twenty five hundred persons homeless.

The city without banking facilities.

No food obtainable except from a central distributing station established by a swiftly organized committee of 50 business men.

Friday night beds were provided for all without need, and hot meals were served at several stations.

Relief measures consisted of orders to commander all of the city's food supplies at once to be gathered to a central garage building. From here the supplies will be distributed to the hungry population upon written or oral orders issued by the relief committee which has taken up permanent headquarters in the Y. M. C. A. offices.

Long lines of hungry persons waited in front of the Y. M. C. A. where they were being fed with sandwiches and loaves of bread. Inside many of the buildings, including church buildings, near the scene of the terrible blaze, women and men work tirelessly in an effort to provide for those with out shelter.

"Not In Love," Says Mrs. Ford In Death Complaint

Detroit—Mrs. May Blinn Ford, charged with attempting to engage a professional gunman to kill her estranged husband, Ney J. Ford, wealthy farmer, will be unable to obtain bonds men to post $25,000 for her release from the county jail, she said Saturday. She declared, however, that she had communicated with relatives in Toledo and they were coming to assist in her defense.

"We are going to fight this case because they know and I know that I hired no one to hurt by husband—at least if I did I can't remember it," she said.

"I married Ney J. Ford because he told me he was a near relative of Henry Ford and because he said he was worth $250,000 in his own name. I may not be in love with him but I never intended to harm him and I do not intend to harm him now."

Ford declared his father and Henry Ford's father were cousins. The relationship was denied by Henry Ford's personal secretary. Continuing her statement, Mrs. Ford said her marriage which took place on Dec. 1, 1921, has been kept secret from her husband's relatives. She added that although married to Ford she was presented as his housekeeper whenever friends and relatives came to call.

RULE COLLEGE MEN MAY PLAY FOR MONEY

Little Five And Normal Officials Formulate New Rulings For State

By Associated Press
Milwaukee — Summer baseball for money will be permitted by the Little Five colleges of Wisconsin and the normal schools of the state, according to a decision made by representatives of both conferences here. The colleges are Beloit, Carroll, Ripon, Northwestern and Lawrence. Such athletes may play on the football, basketball or track teams of the two groups, said Paul Carlson, faculty athletic member of Whitewater normal school Saturday but will not be eligible for baseball in the schools.

The session went on record favoring the amateur and ruling out the professional. It decided the eligibility rules of the Little Five would be adopted by the normal schools and applied to all contests between members of the two associations.

Men who play on "pro" football or basketball teams will be barred from participation in sports of the colleges and normals, as will men who play in such games where admission is charged, other than college or alumni contests.

Relative to the migratory athlete the meeting ruled a man may not transfer and play on other teams under their jurisdiction the same year, but may do so at the end of the school year.

A permanent college normal interconference is planned at a meeting to be held in January.

EXPECT FIGHT FOR LIFE OF LABOR BOARD

Harding's Most Important Recommendation Will Be Opposed By Workers

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1922, by The Post Pub. Co.
Washington—President Harding has taken complete cognizance in his message to congress of the major problems which made the electorate so restless this year and brought such a confused result in the election just a month ago.

The president says something on nearly every subject which might have had anything to do with the ballot box or which might affect the course of affairs in the next national referendum in 1924. Members of both parties will agree that irrespective of the merit of Mr. Harding's proposals, whether they constitute a cure for the ills or a plea in avoidance, the president has nevertheless by his recitation of problems given a comprehensive account of "the state of the union."

AGRICULTURE FIRST

Agriculture stands first and foremost in Mr. Harding's thought. He knows that the revolt in the middle west, indeed the friction inside the Republican party has at its root a dissatisfaction with America's imperfect system of financing the farmer.

Enlargement of the powers of the Farm Loan Bureau together with the permanent establishment of a system that will do at all times what the War Finance corporation did in an emergency is what Mr. Harding proposes.

WORLD KILL BOARD

The most important recommendation he makes is the abolition of the United States Labor board, or rather its complete revision. As has been pointed out again and again in these dispatches, the weakness of the board has been its division into three groups: labor, employer and public. The like arbitration tribunals only represent the real burden placed on the neutral members. Mr. Harding proposes a board to be composed of all neutral members. Thinking also is that the labor board is an ill-fated institution without power to enforce its decrees, the president thrusts forward the idea of making a new division of the Interstate Commerce Commission to concern itself with labor disputes. This provision probably will be bitterly fought by labor for it means that the arbitrary rules of a fair return on investment will be considered by one branch of the Interstate Commerce Commission and that another will fix wages on the basis of what the railroad can afford to pay.

DOESN'T IGNORE TARIFF

Mr. Harding doesn't ignore the tariff in favor of a change in the tariff and promises that the flexible provisions of the law permitting the executive to proclaim changes will not become a dead letter. Immigration touched on too with the suggestion that quotas be enlarged ultimately and that aliens be examined abroad so as to prevent hardships at ports of entry through the denial of admission to applicants who have already made the voyage to American shores.

PROPOSAL TO SUBMIT A CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT prohibiting child labor is not unexpected and will bring friends of the president to point to the "progressive" character of his administration, especially at a time when the "progressive" bloc is advocating such things.

Mr. Harding frankly tells the American people he isn't opposed to amending the constitution when the changes are for the better. It has been reported that he wanted to stand pat on the constitution. But he proposes that all tax exempt securities now be abolished. It will take many years for an amendment of this kind to be ratified but ultimately it will prevail as it falls within the category of "progressive" doctrine on which the radicals have always thrived—it is a measure aimed at the wealthy, something popular with the radical politicians in the states. It has the support of Mr. Harding however, because he thinks it will increase government revenues at a time when the budget seriously needs added sources of income.

THE PROPORTION OF THE MESSAGE CONTAIN A FEW SURPRISES

The president has been reported weakened by the Voilestad act. It has been said he noted a shift of sentiment in the last elections. He comes out in his message as favoring rigorous enforcement of the Voilestad act. He frankly says that provisions of the law are not in his opinion contrary to public desire. He predicts that a repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment is likely and asks for "literal enforcement." Besides, Mr. Harding announces that he will call the governors of all the states into conference here to consider ways and means of enforcing the prohibition laws through the increased use of state machinery. The message is a complete victory for the "drys."

CHANGE DATE FOR EXAM OF POLICEMEN, FIREMEN

The date set by the Appleton fire and water commission for the examination of candidates for policemen and firemen has been changed from Thursday, Dec. 14, to Saturday, Dec. 16. The commission felt that Saturday would be a more convenient day for most applicants than any other weekday. The examination will take place at 2:30 in the afternoon in the city hall.

Think Mystery Man Is Former Rum Violator

By Associated Press
Oshkosh—Local police and sheriff's officers are confident the man picked up in Milwaukee and whose memory appears to have deserted him, beyond saying his name is Albert Lange, is an Oshkosh resident who recently disappeared from this city pending his arraignment in Municipal court on a charge of liquor law violation.

Pictures in Milwaukee newspapers led local officers to identify him as Albert Lange wanted here and Sheriff Goltz left Saturday for Milwaukee to take a look at him. If it is the Oshkosh man he will be brought here. Lange and his wife, Blanche, were arrested following a police raid on Nov. 23, at the Wisconsin house, a small hotel here. Both were charged with illegal possession of liquor. Dec. 1 was set for their appearance in court. Lange was reported too ill to appear and the case was postponed.

Mrs. Lange reported her husband had gone across Lake Winnebago because he feared he would be taken back to the Northern Hospital for the insane where he had been for a time due to excessive use of alcoholics.

EAST PARLEY WEATHERS ITS WORST STORM

Atmosphere Clears As Turks Make Known Their Wishes About Dardanelles

By Associated Press
Lausanne—Optimism reigned supreme in Lausanne Saturday for the Near East conference had weathered what was probably its most difficult session to date.

Timet Pasha's statement Friday of the Turkish views on the Dardanelles question and the reply it brought from Lord Curzon on behalf of the inviting powers resulted in a general clearing of the conference atmosphere. Turkey has apparently broken away from Russian control and Foreign Minister Tchitcherine and his associates, although resentful of Turkey's failure to hold out for complete autonomy in the straits, are accepting the situation.

CANADA OUT AFTER PRINT BUSINESS

New Manufacturers' Bulletin Of Chamber Of Commerce Is Issued

Canada's newspaper industry is gaining business faster than American manufacturers, according to the first issue of the Business Information bureau bulletin of the chamber of commerce.

This statement is based on an official analysis by the United States department of commerce. Shipments from mills in Canada are shown to have increased 44 per cent in 1922 as compared with 1921, while in America the increase for the corresponding period has been only 13 per cent. Canadian mills increased production 38 per cent and American mills only 12 per cent. The industry is operating on a much larger scale in this country than in Canada, however, it is computed on a tonnage basis.

The new bulletin of the chamber will be issued monthly, or more frequently if occasion demands, especially during the coming session of legislature. It will contain a digest of information in various committee publications and reports dealing with topics of interest to industries here. Legislative activity and work in the various state commissions at Madison, especially where the interests of local manufacturers are concerned, are to have space in the bulletin.

PLAN FOR $25,000 CREDIT TO FARMERS

Two More Proposals For Farm Relief Are Brought Before Congress

Washington—Two more farm relief plans were added Saturday to the dozen or more already before congress.

A bill amending the farm loan act to provide additional credit was introduced by Senator Norbeck (Republican, South Dakota) and Representative Steve Stricker (Republican, Kansas) while another introduced by Senator Norbeck and Representative A. P. Nelson (Republican, Wisconsin) would authorize the war finance corporation to make loans to foreign purchasers of American agricultural products.

BEYOND LENOXPORT PLAN

Both of the bills are endorsed by the American Farm Bureau federation and go beyond the administration proposals in the recently introduced Lenoxport plan. However, the differences may be harmonized easily has not yet been developed but certain provisions of the new Norbeck-Stricker measure are contained in other bills introduced by Senator Capper (Republican, Kansas) chairman of the senate farm bill and others of the farm group in congress.

Increase from $10,000 to $25,000 of the maximum loan which could be made to an individual farmer by co-operating farm land banks is one of the principal features of the Norbeck-Stricker bill. Senator Norbeck said that this change would "give local co-operative associations a better chance to compete with the joint stock land banks."

LOANS ON MACHINERY

Such loans also under the new bill, would be available for security on machinery and other details of farm powers and not limited as under the present law to land and buildings.

"The bill which I have introduced," said Senator Norbeck at this feature, "makes it possible for a farmer, who owns money on a farm, to place a mortgage on his land with the federal farm loan association and pay off the debt on the farm machinery. He may also borrow money to educate his family."

PAPER PRICES LOW BUT MILLS ARE KEPT BUSY

Magazine And Book Mills Operate Steadily—Slump In Writing Market

Business of paper mills generally speaking has been fairly good since last May, a survey of the situation in the Fox river valley shows. Mills making book and magazine papers are running at capacity because of the extra large demand for paper during the heavy holiday season. There is a prospect of a gradual slump after about Dec. 15 when advertising decreases.

Mills which do a strictly seasonal business have been rushed the last few weeks after a period of comparative quietness. Prices still are low and unchanged but men say there is no immediate prospect of a change.

HAD TO CLOSE

Writing paper mills have been less fortunate than pulp and book paper manufacturers. Jobs are apparently being depleted the stocks to a 30-day basis and consequently are not buying much. One paper mill in Appleton and Neenah were compelled to close down temporarily a few days ago because of lack of orders.

This condition is believed to be only temporary, however. Millmen say that jobs after their experience, once a year or two ago when they suffered huge losses through shrinkage of inventory made it a fixed policy to limit their stocks to a 30-day basis. During the coal and railroad strike when mills were threatened with forced suspension many jobs were increased their stocks because they feared their supplies might be cut off. A few weeks ago the mills were forced to increase their prices and jobs immediately decided to dispose of their surplus stock and return to a 30-day basis. As soon as this stock is disposed of they will resume ordering, manufacturers believe.

SOME WITHOUT ORDERS

Although most of the book and magazine mills have enjoyed a steady business since last May, a number of companies which had refused all contract business during the high price period were operating on a hand-to-mouth basis until about 30 days ago. During and after the period of the press on this article, the business during the holiday season was not as good as the paper mills of any kind while other mills which had disposed of at least part of their product under contract were in almost continuous operation.

One result of that situation was that their contractless mills were glad to accept orders at almost any price and as a result the price level was kept down.

PLENTY OF HELP

The labor situation in Wisconsin is "easy," millmen say. While there is no surplus of labor there are plenty of men for all the jobs. This is particularly true now because farming and outside construction work is finished for the year and hundreds of men are seeking inside positions for the winter. There is no prospect of a change in wages, manufacturers say. As a general thing the paper industry is in a healthy condition. Here and there a few companies are experiencing slight difficulties but business is improving slowly but surely in the industry as a whole.

BLAME WIRE FOR DEATH OF FOND DU LAC COUPLE

By Associated Press
Fond du Lac — Investigation made by the Fond du Lac Electric company showed that the insulation on the line cord from which Mr. and Mrs. George Kohls received their fatal shock Thursday night was in a bad condition and that the wire was entirely bare for a short distance near the lamp, according to M. H. Frank, manager of the electric company.

"Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Kohls experienced a shock when they handled the cord except when they touched the spot where the insulation was torn off and the wire was bare. This was further borne out by the fact that Corneil Caudill experienced no shock even though he jerked the wire out of Mr. Kohls' hand," said the manager.

"If the insulation on the cord had been in safe condition the accident would not have occurred even though the voltage which came into the house at the time of the accident was caused by reason of contact of wires outside the building," Mr. Frank declared.

SCHUSSMAN HEADS REVIVED CLUB OF VALLEY MENTORS

Meeting Here Is Attended By 42—Baker Pleases With Music Program

Leo Schussman, superintendent of schools in Kaukauna, was elected president of Fox River Valley Schoolmasters club at a meeting at the Sherman house on Friday evening at which the club was revived and reorganized. C. C. Bishop, superintendent of schools at Oshkosh, was elected vice president and H. F. Sutton, principal of Howe junior high school at Green Bay was elected secretary-treasurer.

The meeting was called by Appleton school executives for the purpose of reviving the club. It had proved invaluable in years past to the school men. The gathering was attended by 42 principals and superintendents from cities between Marinette and Fond du Lac. The date for the next meeting has been set for Feb. 16 at a place to be selected by the officers.

Dr. Earl Baker provided a program of music designed to prove President Elliott's statement that "music when properly taught is the greatest mind trainer of them all." Through the courtesy of Frank Younger, principal of the Fourth district school, children from the fourth grade of that school were present to demonstrate how children respond to music teaching with an initiative, desire and ability to do music work in a very efficient manner.

The visitors seemed greatly pleased with the music demonstration. Dr. Baker had asked them to interrupt and ask questions if they wished, but no one said a word. After the children had been excused, one man said that he could not hear to ask questions when they were singing any more than he could ask questions of an artist when he was painting pictures. Dr. Baker answered many questions from the men concerning the possibilities of musical development in their schools.

While I was walking down Appleton-st I spied a team of mules drawing a drag from the Marshall Paper Co. They started running near Hauer's feed store and continued down Appleton-st until the depot and then turned and ran down North-st. Several men endeavored to stop the team but it was very difficult on account of the slippery pavement. They ran a long way on North-st before they were stopped.

It was a good thing the railing was there or he would have dropped more than thirty feet to Appleton-st hill.

IT'S AN ILL WIND

As I was walking down State street on Tuesday about four-thirty an old gentleman was walking a short way ahead of me. It was quite windy and the wind blew off his hat which fell on the sidewalk a short distance ahead of him. As he stooped to pick up the hat, his wig blew off. He picked up wig and hat in great haste, placed them on his head and walked off as if nothing had happened.

DANGEROUS FOOLING

Thursday evening about five o'clock some boys were sliding with sleds on State-st. One boy was sliding in the road when a Ford touring car came down the street. The driver, a young man, thought he would scare the boy and turned in as if to run him over, and his back wheels hit the sled turning both that and the boy over. The boy got up and shook his fist at the car which had kept on going.

STEALING PENNIES

Appleton is becoming quite cited for we have milk bottle thieves like they have in Chicago. Monday morning as I came down the corner of Emily onto Story-st I spied two boys sneaking off with the money they had taken out of a milk bottle. I was just too late to catch them. The lady told me this was the second time money had been taken so we better buy tickets.

ANOTHER SMASHUP

The corner of Superior street and Second-ave has proved to be one of Appleton's most slippery corners. For Friday afternoon a New London car bearing license No. 163,084, skidded off the road and almost onto the sidewalk, in front of Hoffenberg's meat market, breaking the left rear wheel and smashing all the spokes.

WISCONSIN RAPIDS MEN VISIT FILTRATION PLANT

Members of the water commission of Wisconsin Rapids paid Appleton a visit Thursday to inspect the filtration plant. That city expects to erect one soon. A. J. Hall, superintendent of the plant escorted the three officials through the pumping station and explained the results of the processes used here. The visitors seemed highly pleased with the plant and the method of conducting it and declared they would recommend a similar equipment for Wisconsin Rapids.

EXPECT LUMBER RUSH NEXT SPRING

Late Building Season Is Keeping Stocks At Mills Depleted

Strength continues to feature the lumber market in all its branches. Some building items have declined slightly in price, but much less than could be expected at this time of the year, when building operations generally have dropped off to an insignificant volume. This year has been featured by an unusually late building season, and operations are still being carried forward more or less actively throughout the country, especially on the west and east coasts and in the south. This is one factor in the present remarkable strength of all building lumbers, but the exceedingly low mill stocks and the continued poor transportation facilities afforded the manufacturers have also been influential.

The lumber industry in the meanwhile is looking forward to great volume of building next year, and consequently to a heavy lumber consumption. Retail stocks as a whole are depleted literally to rock bottom, and dealers will have to buy considerable quantities of lumber in order to meet spring needs. As manufacturers' stocks also are very light and the mills in many cases have their production booked far ahead, it does not appear possible for them to accumulate any large stocks for the spring trade during the few remaining months.

Distributors are therefore urging their customers to buy early in order to avoid a coming great rush for lumber and the consequent intensified stock shortage and higher prices. Many of them are heeding this warning but the majority of retailers are still slow in coming on the market, chiefly because they desire to complete their annual inventories first. Some authorities claim that orders now can be delivered before spring. Industrial demand meanwhile remains very heavy, with the railroads the leading purchasers. Many large orders have been placed by them for new rolling stock and other equipment of all kinds, and the lumber requirements run into very large quantities.

Timbers are among the items which have a very strong call, and these hold firm in price, with a pronounced upward tendency. The furniture, automobile and other hardwood consuming manufacturers are actively on the market, buying everything suitable to their requirements. The box and crating manufacturers, who are enjoying a big business at this time, are consuming much of the lower grades, which are not in enormous surplus anywhere, in contrast with the usual situation. Export demand is very fair, that for hardwoods being much above what it has been at any other time during the last two years.

The first meeting of creditors will be held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, Dec. 23, in the referee's office in Appleton.

Charles Gorham of Antigo is also a voluntary bankrupt with assets of $1,147.23 and liabilities of $1,930.33. Most of his assets are claimed as exempt. The first meeting of creditors will be held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, Dec. 23, at the referee's office.

Students in the Latin department of Appleton high school are making posters to demonstrate to the other students in the school that Latin is not so dead as they seem to think. The derivation of such words as "Rotary" will be shown on these posters, which are to be placed on the bulletin boards in the hall.

The students are working under the direction of Mrs. Hester Baker, who has used the poster method in her classes before. This is the first attempt on the part of the Latin students to demonstrate in a definite way the value of the study of the subject in which they are interested.

Tour Of Stores Gives Many Suggestions For Gifts For Christmas

Doll-books Are On Sale For Kids—New Modes Of Ornamentation Make Proverbial Presents For Adults Appear Really New

This is not intended for the sensible ears of those ambitious and intelligent persons who start the day after Christmas collecting boxes, holiday odds and ends and new ideas for the forthcoming festive season, nor yet for those who serenely watch throughout each succeeding month for the proper token for the proper person and who smile condescendingly at the "Do your Christmas shopping early" signs which are placed in conspicuous places by farsighted merchants in an attempt to overcome the final mad rush the last few days before Christmas.

Nor is it for those ingenious and industrious ones who from sheer joy of work and clever ideas make all sorts of unbelievable things out of the contents of the ribbon bag or the tail of dad's worn silk shirt. It is for the express purpose of trying to alleviate to some extent that whirl of last minute buying by the busy person who has many other duties to take his or her time. The simple message concerning a few of the season's newest novelties and practical gift suggestions is this story's purpose and perhaps will make Christmas giving a double pleasure. For the difficult thing about the season is that one's mind is chock-full of a hundred and one things and it isn't the easiest thing to sit down and think about a number of novel or serviceable gifts which will be certain to please.

YOUNGSTERS FIRST
The first members of the family to consider are the youngsters for they are really the ones for whom Christmas has the greatest joy and most excitement. They wait for weeks in breathless suspense wondering what old St. Nick will have in his bag for them this year, and Oh, how big their eyes grow as they crowd around the bright tree and pull forth a marvelous train that runs miles on imagination if not on tracks and what exciting times are stored up in the new Tyro blocks which soon turn themselves into sure enough houses under the efforts of busy little fingers. Little foreign made birds with actual feathers are real new as are the Le Gyroscope tops, electric wash machines, felt dolls and some of the larger mechanical toys.

Several new stories for children on the market this year are cleverly written and entertaining. With each book of one series there is a doll about which the story is written. This makes it possible for the child to visualize and really enjoy the story for the incidents recorded in the book may be reenacted later by the dolls in the child's nursery. The books are called "Ragady Ann" and "Ragady Andy" and the characters going with them are rag dolls which are just the kind to roll all over the floor and enjoy without fear of breaking. The "Pinkey Pup" is a story built on the same plan but the pink gingham pup comes folded up in the back of the book and must be stuffed before he can be made to act very vicious.

SUITS AND DOLLS
Indian suits and cowboy outfits will please the small boy more than anything else for in the costumes he has the possibilities of hours of contented play when the vivid imagination of the youngster is soaring to unlimited heights and he forgets to be fretting about nothing to do. The little girl will like costumes too, but she will be more interested in the things for her dolls. A washing outfit consisting of a small wash machine, a board, wringer, clothesline and pins will keep her busy washing her dolls' dresses every Monday when mother is having the family washing done. She may be in the way of course, but what is that to having her occupied and happy and at the same time learning to do things?

But in spite of the lure of the new toys one must not forget the practical gifts which will include all sorts of wearing apparel. The popular angora caps and scarfs are not only attractive but exceptionally warm and nothing looks nicer for outdoor sports when the children sally forth with the new skates or skis. Silk umbrellas, handkerchiefs, neat little vanity cases and mesh bags which attempt to rival mother's sewing boxes and embroidered nick-nacks are practical for the girl while brother will appreciate big fur and leather gauntlets, scarfs, a gun, hunting and sports clothes, chess, leather bill books and cuff links.

USEFUL THINGS
For the older girl just entering high school and the college girl many little novelties may be given which will not only be useful but attractive. Desk and dresser lamps with soft colored shades, candlesticks, candy jars, address books, diaries, traveling cases, ivory pieces, bright cushions, brocade vanity cases, incense burners, and oriental baskets all delight the receiver and are practical and attractive. One of the extremely popular novelties this year is a lamp shade made to resemble a fair French lady with powdered curly hair and voluminous silk skirts which form the shade. It has become the vogue to have one's toilet accessories of puffed and plaited ribbon trimmed with tiny rosebuds, garlanded with gilt galleons and varicolored nosegays. Trays, mirrors, brushes, powder boxes, glove and hair-pin boxes; in fact all the fascinating necessities of milady's dressing table are thus ornamented. Spanish combs, beaded handbags and feather fans are other popular ads which the big sister just loves to follow and a present of one of them will forever endear the giver.

The high school and college boy will simply must have his military brushes, and silk mufflers as well as angora ones. Hunting shirts, books, skating gloves, bill folds and leather jenkins are all more or less necessary articles and there isn't a better time in which to give them than Christmas. Another thing he would be delighted with is stationery bearing his name and address, very much the same as he may give his best girl.

MUCH FOR MOTHER
Gifts for mother are not very hard to find for there is probably a bigger assortment of things she will appreciate than any other member of the family. This season the artistic articles which so add to the home and its furnishings are being sold in great numbers. Polychrome is very popular in candle sticks, picture frames, lamp standards, and vases and the same articles may be found in other materials. Rich colorings are popular and all sorts of Dutch and Japanese china and pottery as well as silverware, unique decorated candles, oriental lamp shades, book ends, pillows and tapestry table scarfs are things mother can't fail to like. She is more or less interested in the little things that make a home attractive and in many cases is not so apt to buy them for herself which gives a splendid opportunity for someone else to do so. Tea sets are very artistic this year.

CASHING IN A NEW THRIFT

During the next few weeks large sums of money will be turned over to millions of citizens all over the country. Some of it comes from the Christmas money funds or thrift clubs of the banks. It is estimated that $180,000,000 of such funds will be distributed to approximately 5,000,000 people in the next two weeks. On Dec. 15, the government will redeem certain of its Victory bonds, and on Jan. 1, the first issue of War Savings stamps will be cashed.

Much of this money goes to persons of moderate incomes. Victory bonds and War Savings stamps were purchased through the greatest economy by citizens who had never bought securities and whose bank accounts were small. The thrift clubs of the banks, too, represent systematic saving from comparatively small wages and salaries.

All of this money, now coming back to the public, is the result of new national thrift. The Christmas money may go largely to make holiday happiness. What will be done with the cash from Victory notes and War Savings Stamps? If the lesson of thrift has truly been learned, as much as possible of this money will be re-invested, safely and sensibly. It may be invested in securities or in family health and education, but it will not be turned over to foolish projects or to gold brick speculations.

A DRIVE FOR PROHIBITION

A drive for enforcement of prohibition laws is on, under the direction of federal authorities. Washington has called upon federal district attorneys and state officials to respond with increased cooperation and activity.

In a circular sent out by Attorney-General Daugherty, he asks for greater vigilance on the part of all authorities, and the pushing of violation cases with more rigorous sentences for offenders. It is suggested that the injunction features of the federal statute be invoked more freely and nuisance proceedings brought where they may be indicated.

It is hoped that this campaign will be more successful than efforts made thus far to rid America of the shameful conditions now making a mockery of the prohibition law. If a majority of the people really are opposed to the Volstead act, it would be modified by orderly process. So long as it stands on the statute books, defiance of it ought not to be tolerated.

AMERICANIZATION OF THE FOREIGN MOTHER

To Americanize a family, the home must be Americanized. To Americanize the home, the mother within that home must be reached. Thus far it has been with difficulty that the foreign mother has been interested. Custom prohibits her going from her family to night schools. Her own language suffices within her home. Why struggle with another tongue? The great tide of the new country's ideals sweeps past, divides her from the younger members of her family, leaves her stranded in the little cove of the daily struggle of ineffectual house-keeping.

The foreign mother can be reached through her conscious need of help in solving the problems of living in a new environment. Her dominant desires are to secure physical well-being for her family at a minimum cost.

Old World customs are the result of gradual adjustment to environmental conditions. Centuries have been required to bring about these results. Torn free from that environment the old customs fit but ill in the new country. The housewife is different. They provide conveniences the uses of which are unknown, but hamper the freedom of the housekeeper in ways for which she is unprepared.

The food supplies are different in kind and in method of sale. The clothing offered her has none of the qualities for which she has been accustomed to look. Her children make demands, the meaning of which is beyond her. She struggles as one with bound eyes in a new locality.

Rightly taught lessons in home economics are her greatest need. Through these she will acquire a use of the new language; she will learn the use of new foods; she will acquire the ability to choose the new clothing with something of the wisdom with which she clothed her family in the old country; she will understand American standards of household sanitation and personal hygiene; and she will recognize the function of the American public school.

Home economic lessons for foreign women should be taught in the daytime; the classes should be small; the work should be extremely practical. It is a mistake to think that foreign families must be Americanized via the stomach. The foreign mother needs to know how to use American household conveniences; how to trade in English-speaking stores; how to avail herself of American city conveniences and services.

The foreign mother can be Americanized through her own great interest—her home!

CHICAGO GOING TO THE GULF

Illinois has formally approved the extensive plans to connect Chicago and Illinois river front cities with the Gulf of Mexico. The state has ordered construction of the locks and dams, and work will start soon. The improvements will not only connect Chicago with the Gulf, but New Orleans with the Great lakes. Every city on the Mississippi from St. Louis south will have navigation to the Great lakes, and every city on the Illinois will have a traffic course to the south seas.

Proponents of the St. Lawrence project and Mississippi river enterprises will note that Chicago and Illinois river ports secure two routes to the seaboard. Chicago will be a gulfport and some day probably will be an Atlantic port. Lake and river cities should pool their undertakings and work in concert. Water rates will be great factors and of inestimable importance, in both domestic and foreign trade.

TAX ON NATURAL RESOURCES

The opinion of the United States supreme court that a state may place a special tax on natural resources is in line with the idea that the public right to control natural resources is inherent. The tribunal holds that a special tax on the output of anthracite coal is legal. But it is probable that this is not the last that we shall hear of taxation of natural resources. Other states also have rights. All of these states must share, somehow, in the benefits accruing from natural resources.

Petroleum, like anthracite, is practically a monopoly. Shall a special tax be levied on petroleum? And a special tax on lumber? And a special tax on bauxite? And a special tax on wool? And a special tax on zinc? If the idea is carried out, free trade will cease to prevail among our states, and we shall have a special tariff scheme. Anthracite cannot stand the special tax long, and neither could petroleum. Anthracite in reality is not a monopoly, after all, as, with a very high price, it would compete with higher grades of bituminous.

SIX STATES IN COMITY COMPACT

Arizona, California, Colorado, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming have entered into an agreement, formally signed, for the equitable utilization and development of the Colorado river. Millions of dollars will be spent on irrigation and water-power projects.

What a contrast between this friendly arrangement and the usual conflict among neighboring states in Europe. There, each state fights for full control of every resource or advantage; here, plans are worked out for proportionate sharing in benefits. The compact shows, too, that each of the American states relinquishes no vital sovereign rights through the Union in which there is strength.

EDUCATING THE ABDOMEN

Old readers, if any there be, may recall that I had something to say some time ago about the futile abdomen.

The general futility of the abdomen favored by man's more or less upright posture and the wearing of stilted under the heels becomes a serious factor of ill health and inefficiency when furthered by the vicious habit of wearing artificial supports such as corsets to serve the purpose of the muscles. And even in men the purpose of the muscles. And the muscles with nothing more than a belt a great deal of unnecessary illness or suffering results from weakness of the muscles due to lack of sufficient exercise of these muscles. The man who sits most of the time is likely to have futile fat and perhaps digestive disturbances and circulatory deficiencies due to ptosis or sagging of organs in the abdomen. Man or woman, boy or girl, who acquires a slouchy posture in sitting, standing or walking, the posture of fatigue and weakness, the posture of indifference, mental feebleness and weak character, seldom escapes suffering the physical ill consequences. Headaches, backaches, mental dullness or ineptitude at work or play, cold hands and feet, so called "indigestion," constipation, poor general nutrition, melancholic disposition, sallow complexion—that will do enough harm for one day! Let us bring on the pills.

There are scores of fine exercises for the abdomen, such as chopping wood, climbing trees, high kicking, the dachshund crawl, the monkey walk, and just sitting, standing or walking vigorously erect. And then there are simple gymnastics which may be performed in privacy. These gymnastic movements are particularly helpful when the abdomen is so weak that it gives at some point and a hernia (rupture or breach) is feared. One with a small hernia may learn these exercises while supporting the hernia with one hand, and in many instances the exercises will prevent or cure the threatened hernia if followed faithfully over a period of many months. The same exercises are valuable for those who wish to avoid or discard corsets or other unnecessary supports. And finally they are good medicine for what ails the dignified man of 30 and upwards who finds himself the sole director of a corporation.

1. Lie on your back, hands beside hips, and lift both legs slowly up to vertical, then lower them slowly to floor again, repeating anywhere from 3 to 30 times (after you have grown used to exercise).

2. Lie on your back and rise to sitting from 3 to 30 times. At first a weight over your feet may be necessary.

3. Same as No. 1, except that with each movement the thighs should be flexed against the body.

4. Same as No. 2 except that with each movement the body should be flexed against the thighs.

The only essential directions about breathing with these exercises are: Breathe in with extension movements and breathe out with flexion, as you may find natural, otherwise breathe as you prefer. But breathe.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

They Eat Canned Quinces

Soon to go in pictures and of course must look my best. I read in a book by a famous beauty specialist that noted actresses preserve their beauty and clear their complexion by eating fruit for breakfast each morning. What would you eat and how much?

Answer.—Eat a half dozen watermelons or a crate of oranges and knock 'em cold. Some fruit for breakfast every morning is healthful, all right, but don't take the beauty specialist too seriously.

Thirty Nine Off

Three years ago I started following your Karel regimen, and I certainly got results. I am 37 years old, 6'1 1/2 inches tall, and when I started Karel I weighed 174 pounds. Today I weigh 135. I never eat breakfast and I go very easy on the carbohydrates. My mother nearly has fits because I don't eat more—she fears I'll get weakened by dieting. However, I feel much better than I felt when I was so fat. Now I am anxious to try your Brady symphony—the New Brady symphony, just to see if it will add the charm of pep to my already greatly improved appearance. Mrs. P. J. A.

Answer.—The symphony is speaking to you. Don't let mother catch you playing it—she'll have fits just to hear you grow too vigorous and unmanageable. The popular notion that fat folks must eat like horses or grow weak is in the same category with the notion that the "delicate" sex should keep as frail as possible.

Nervous Breakdown

Please tell me if six cups of strong tea a day will break the nerves down. Mine are badly bent, inasmuch as I take crying spells which I cannot control and for which I have no reason.—Miss P. F. O.

Answer.—If your nerves are already bent one or two cups of tea a day would be about the right load. Tea stimulates the brain, like coffee. Over stimulation of the brain may excite the abnormal crying spells.

Physical Training Is As Necessary As Mental Training For Success

(These articles were prepared by leaders in physical training activities in Appleton as part of the campaign carried on by the American Legion to foster education. These articles conclude the series.)

BY H. D. MCHESNEY
Physical Director, Lawrence College.
OUR FUTURE NATIONAL PHYSIQUE

When America entered the war with Germany, the American public was stunned at the revelations of the examining boards for their statistics showed that out of every one hundred men examined for army service eighty were rejected because of physical disabilities. If eighty per cent of our young men were physically unfit it is apparent that American stock is depreciating physically. It may be that the emergencies of war compelling us to make a self examination that we may determine in which direction the nation is tending in its physical condition. The American people, the mature population and will lead it to adopt measures to insure the real education and actual development of the growing and developing generation.

The physical education of our young men has been left almost entirely to our educational institutions, which have employed startlingly inefficient methods. There has been a tendency in the system to confine athletics to those best adapted to them, excluding large numbers.

It is evident that such a system must be revised before the process of regenerating the race can begin. We must reform our entire system and emphasize training for everyone as against training for the few. The more men and boys we can get into organized athletics the better, but how to do it is the question. We must reach two big classes of men; first, the boys and young men of the coming generation, who are now in the elementary and high school; second, the present generation, of under-standards.

To reach the first class, physical education should be introduced into all of our institutions of learning; a course that extends through out the entire curriculum, and is serious enough to be rated among the most important subjects taught. It must form a major department in every school system, from the elementary school to the university.

Such a course should be made compulsory, so that every student may derive as much benefit as possible from it and finish his college work physically fit, and physically as well as mentally efficient.

If we are to reduce the great number who have gone without training and spread the benefits through out all classes, we must furnish ample facilities. Space is fundamentally essential, whether it be city or village. We need a well equipped municipal gymnasium; more baseball diamonds, golf links, tennis courts, and well equipped athletic fields and playgrounds.

Furthermore we need a more adequate series of physical examinations and tests to determine the needs of the individual, and prescribe such activities as will tend to bring every student below par up to normal.

As for the other class, the majority of which have entered our institutions, we must return to one of the fundamental aims of physical education, which is the correction of abnormal deviations of structure and function.

These men who were rejected for flat feet, round shoulders, crooked spines, flabbiness of muscles, and over and under weight, require careful examinations and a specialist in this work, to outline exercises best adapted to each, which will correct their particular defects.

We cannot eradicate these evils in a day. Major-General Wood said, "A sound physical base is the first essential in any rational plan of national preparedness," and because a man lacked that "sound physical base" he was rejected for army service. But we find these rejected men unfit for the other duties of citizenship, for unfit men cannot come to full enjoyment of life, full participation in business, or live out the full length of days. We are reaping the fruits of our inactivity; let us emphasize "a sound physical base" by every investment in the proper physical education of our young people feeling confident that every such investment whether it be in the form of time or money will yield the richest returns not only in dollars and cents but also in true success and happiness, and in a sound national physique.

CONSERVATION

BY MARK CATLIN

This country needs the maximum amount of conservation of its forests, its streams, its lakes, its swamps and all of its natural resources in order that young America shall continue to be an outdoor people.

If we could make outdoor people of all our citizens, the present ill of our country would be in a large measure disappear; for out there men do not think mean things of his neighbor; there is no desire or incentive to commit crime; the petty jealousies of individuals sing into oblivion in the enjoyment of the wonders of nature. Out there is only one God and one Church. He builds better bodies, better souls and makes all mankind contented with himself.

Let us, therefore, conserve; talk conservation and above all, act conservation to the end that the inheritance to get out of doors shall not vanish from the earth. If our fish, our game, our lakes, our streams, our forests and our other natural resources are kept, our people will get out of doors; their minds and bodies lifted from the drudgeries of life, and they will be kept an outdoor people.

PURPOSE OF TRAINING

Primitive man's purpose in physical training was to keep physically fit enough to enable him to get something to eat or to keep from being eaten. His livelihood and his life depended upon his ability to throw, run, jump, climb and often to swim. Only the physically fit survived.

In time of war the purpose of physical education was just to train the men of military age in the nation so that they may be fit to undertake one of the basic duties of citizenship and that is military training for service, and second, to train men who are accepted as physical effectives so that they will have stamina, endurance, speed, agility, courage and aggressiveness enough to be able to throw, run, jump, climb and often to swim, quickly and to act with snap and precision in action.

The purpose in the high schools is not unlike the purpose in the army. The difference lies in the point of emphasis and therefore the methods in attaining results are modified. Through exercise and play we aim to develop the uniform trait of cooperation, to control the spirit of rivalry and the instincts of fear; to overcome shyness and egotism; to supplant the bullying spirit by one of kindness and lastly to foster aggressiveness rather than submissiveness. Physical training is not primarily for exercise and recreation as stated above.

PLAYGROUNDS

It is a significant fact that the playground movement was brought to America from Germany, and that it was carried back to Europe, vastly improved, when our soldiers and Y. M. C. A. directors taught France the value of organized athletics and play. These same soldiers, returned, are advocating all-round education for every American child, whether native or foreign born. We have reason to feel confident that they will realize that play is one of the strongest educational forces at our command, and see that the leisure life of the children is adequately supervised by the city. We have a fair amount of equipment in Appleton, but through failure to furnish adequate supervision, do not realize on the investment. Can we afford to allow so much of the education of our future citizens to be carried on in alleys, empty box-cars, and vacant lots, while our play-grounds stand idle?

EDUCATION FOR GIRLS

Physical education is recently taking an increasingly important place in the field of general education and has come to be accepted by many as one of the most important phases of education in the training for citizenship. And in this modern age, training for citizenship is just as necessary for the girl as for the boy. Women now compete with men in many fields, and new occupations are continually opening to them. Physical education trains for citizenship in two ways. Primarily, it builds up health and teaches the laws of right living. To the girl who aspires to take some part in the business world, health is a first necessity.

Health is even more important to the girl from the viewpoint of motherhood. And surely, to be a successful mother is to be the highest kind of a successful citizen.

Secondly, physical education trains for citizenship through character building. Organized games, contests and competitions offer opportunities such as are not offered elsewhere in a school curriculum for training in fairness, lawfulness, good sportsmanship, and cooperation. Thus, thru play, are presented the opportunities and the problems, the adjustments and the punishments that will later occur in a different form in the business of life.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION AND HYGIENE

BY A. P. JENSEN

Physical Director, Y. M. C. A.
The study and practice of physical education and hygiene is entirely for the betterment of the most wonderful piece of machinery—the human body.

By physical education we are taught the value of systematic exercise, to bring into use those muscles and tissues of the body that every day use does not give. The human body is made up of many muscles, tissues, and of life, that particular natural laws of life, that particular being is a dead issue and becomes a burden to the progress of the world.

All parts of the human body are put there for a purpose. If any of those parts become inactive they soon become dead to the rest of the body. Any one who has suffered with a broken arm, experiences a difficulty in using that arm again after it is removed from the sling. This isn't entirely because of the break, but the useless condition the arm has been in for six or eight weeks.

High schools, colleges, universities and Young Men's Christian Associations are realizing the big importance of physical education plays in giving everybody the best that is to be gotten out of life and a great deal of money is being spent every year for the promotion of physical training, games and recreation.

Hygiene is the study of sanitation in relation to the human body and goes hand in hand with the study of

RELATION OF PUBLIC ELEVATORS TO MERE MAN'S HAT PUZZLES

Into a tired world already too full of vital issues and unsolvable problems the Mayor of Cleveland injects another. He has issued an official request to the male citizens of Ohio's metropolis to discontinue the practice of removing their hats in elevators in municipal buildings, in the interest of comfort, conservation of space and efficiency generally. As an issue on which to turn editorial guns, this furnishes no less wide a field for argument, support and opposition than does ship subsidy or the eighteenth amendment. And apparently it is just one more thing, on which the world will never agree, for the opposing sides seem to be quite hopelessly at variance.

"It's a tradition of Cleveland, Ohio," remarks the BROOKLYN EAGLE, evidently with some faint, far-off remembrance of three-cent fares running through its mind, this thing of having its mayors "rush in where angels fear to tread." Another writer in another large city observes that "a queer thing to get excited about is the question whether men who choose to ride with totally strange women in elevators should remove their hats or keep them on, yet a lot of persons do get excited about it," and thereupon editors all over the country proceed to prove that their Chicago colleague is entirely right about it by getting duly excited.

"Running a big city is a man's sized job," observes the TOLEDO BLADE, and it adds, "in some particulars, that of a fussy old woman." Nevertheless, "it is one of the pleasant things about municipal authorities, that they can take time from distributing offices, refusing official dictating legislation, vetoing legislation, scolding janitors and policemen and electricians and pipe-fitters, answering complaints about impudent park attendants and dodging requests for charitable subscription—it is fine, we say, that they yet have leisure in which to decide upon matters involving the ancient laws of 'chivalry.' Thus enters a new era, declares the PLAIN DEALER of the mayoral constituency, 'old customs pass away. Copybook precepts familiar in youth give way to new doctrines of what's what in social usage.' With this drawn lightly above the ears, we shall rise to new levels of civic consciousness."

While Mayor Kohler "may have thought he was going to change matters" by his edict, the NASHVILLE BANNER thinks the chances are against such an assumption. Nevertheless the ALBANY NEWS sounds a call for "Hats off" to the intrepid mayor, for, after all, he is right, "it is nonsense removing hats in office elevators."

"What is there about an elevator that should require the removal of the hat?" asks the CHICAGO NEWS. "As a matter of fact an elevator is virtually as much a public conveyance as a street car, and much cheaper to ride in. Yet men do not remove their hats when women enter street cars. The fact that elevators travel a vertical course while street cars go horizontally can medicine. With medicine we seek to cure disease, while with hygiene we seek to prevent disease. Hygienic can be put under three heads: Hygiene of the public; hygiene of the home; hygiene of the individual.

GET PLENTY OF FRESH AIR
Our living rooms and bed rooms should be ventilated day and night to insure safety. Sleep with the windows open the year 'round.

This is Secretary Lansing's message to the American people in a recent speech: "Live in the outdoors when you can, sleep in the outdoors, avoid too rich food and too much food, and engage in exercise which is a pleasure and not a drudgery."

hardly account for the difference in the required etiquette." The TOPEKA CAPITAL is equally mystified over the unique position occupied by the elevator in that regard, and it looks in vain for the logic of the thing. What reason can be applied to the problem argues against it, for "when elevators are crowded, as they are apt to be, it is an annoyance to everybody if hats have to be removed. The act of taking them off in a crowded place is awkward, elbows are jabbed into backs, ribs and stomachs, and persons are sometimes left with hand in air, holding a hat aloft and unable to get down with out doing bodily injury to the women or to their hats." The CLEVELAND NEWS AGREES fully. Crowded conditions do not "permit the carrying of hats at port, present or order," it says, and "intelligence suggests that men keep their hats on and try to make room for women wishing to crowd in." Anyway, so far as courtesy to women is concerned, what, it asks, "could be more idiotic than the pseudo-gentleman who removes his hat in honor of the ladies in a crowded lift and then blows tobacco smoke in their faces?"

The BOSTON HERALD adds another complication. "If men should remove their hats when women enter an elevator, should they remove them when the elevator has a woman operator?" It earnestly inquires. "A woman being a woman, why is not the lady of the lever entitled to deference? Running an elevator is as honorable an occupation, is it not, as running a type writer, or being a secretary, or selling wearing apparel, or attending sewing bees?"

The elevator, it appears, is one of the few places that have stood out against the killing onslaught of advancing femininity. "Women strident only have demanded equal rights, and they are getting them," declares the CINCINNATI TIMES STAR. "They can vote, and they also can stand in street cars so far as most men are concerned. But the elevator remained a place of chivalrous salutation. To remove the hat was an easy method of showing medieval respect for a woman. It involved no sacrifice of a seat." But even there a new element was introduced, as the HARTFORD TIMES explains it.

"It came down to a contest between chivalry and efficiency, and efficiency won." "Making every square inch count is no doubt a question of life or death in the big cities," with JERSEY CITY JOURNAL, concedes. "But if the little amenities that give life color and flavor are to be sacrificed on the altar of the cubic centimeter why not go the whole hog? If space is so valuable in a Cleveland elevator, why not save a few more inches by prohibiting shoes larger than sixes?" From the far-western viewpoint of the SEATTLE TIMES the amazing thing is that the "gentleness and courtesy which prompts a man to show deference to a woman" should be so prevalent as to need chiding, and "the inclination of the rest of the country will be to congratulate Cleveland instead of con- ducing with its Mayor."

But "is it, after all," asks the CEDAR RAPIDS GAZETTE, "a serious matter whether men take off their hats in elevators or not? It may be that we are finding other ways of expressing our respect for women. To give them a larger place in the world of affairs was a tribute to their worth that exceeds all the fine amenities of the glorious days when knighthood was in flower."

AMERICA'S DEBT FOR GOLD
Manchester—The Edinburgh correspondent of the Guardian says Lord Riddell, speaking at the Edinburgh Philosophical Institution to-night, said a great deal of nonsense was written and spoken about this country being a back number. While our roads were model, he said the London policeman stood on a world pinnacle as the controller of traffic, and Rockefeller and other American millionaires should discharge Britain's debt to America because Scotsmen gave America gold.

'Lulu Bett' Play Wins Praise Here

Wisconsin Players Prove Highly Capable In Production At Chapel

The Wisconsin Players production of "Miss Lulu Bett," Zona Gale's $1,000 prize play was thoroughly enjoyed by an audience of 400 people at Lawrence Memorial chapel on Friday evening. The entire cast was splendidly chosen for the play and gave a sympathetic interpretation of the selfish exactions of Dwight Deacon and his family from Miss Lulu Bett, sister of Mrs. Deacon and family drudge. Little Helen Shannon, who is a child not older than the one she portrayed on the stage, was perhaps the most finished and clever child actress ever seen in Appleton. She really was acting the part of a spoiled child for no youngster could have a more even temper and be less presumptuous than Miss Shannon behind scenes.

SHOWS CRUEL FATHER

The story of Miss Lulu is a subtle portrayal of the cruelty of a selfish man toward the woman who makes his entire family life, while the others of the family including his wife, do nothing but exasperate him. The part Dwight Deacon was taken by George Robinson, who made the man as mean as possible. Mr. Robinson is a character actor of unusual ability, all of which showed in his interpretation. Miss Lulu herself was played by Miss Helena Camp, who is a wonderful actress. She was able to take the part of the family drudge and to show the sudden change which comes to a woman through the attention and love of a man. The part of Nina was taken by Louise Knoll, and that of Cornish, the character who always said the wrong thing and had a great liking for Miss Lulu's meat pie, was taken by Ralph Schoolman.

TAKE PARTS WELL

Ira Kison made a very attractive, helpless and selfish wife in the part of Ina Deacon, while Mrs. Laura Sherry was good in the part of Grandma Bett, the sharp-tongued old lady who hated to be treated as though she didn't have a brain in her head. The juvenile lover parts of the play were taken by Miss Billie Harris as Diana Deacon and Elton Hackett as Bobby Larkin.

The play was presented in the chapel under unusual difficulties. Because of the lack of theatrical equipment in the place, no ceiling drops could be put up and the entire set had to be made unusually shallow because of the wide apron on the stage. One moonlight scene on the porch was somewhat spoiled because the lighting effects could not be produced.

SEEK ASSISTANCE

From the standpoint of acting and interpretation of serious drama, the Wisconsin Players are doing a great service to those who are interested in the theatre and its allied art. Ralph Schoolman presented the possibility of Appleton people becoming nonresident members of the organization and thus making it possible for the players to put on more productions which they can bring into the state. Mrs. Sherry, founder of the players, explained after the performance that the players wish to become a full time company instead of a group of volunteers who must do all their rehearsing at night and at odd times. They hope to be able to give places in their company to rising young actors and actresses and to give them the training and artistic inspiration in Wisconsin rather than to have them go to New York where progress is slow at best.

First Sorority Dancing Party Held On Friday

The first formal dancing party of the year to be given by college students was held Friday evening when Kappa Alpha Theta sorority entertained its members and friends. Christmas decorations consisting of a tinsel ceiling and a Christmas tree in the center of the floor made it decidedly a yuletide party. A red candle sent out its light from each window.

A number of old-fashioned dances and circle two-steps as features dances created a great deal of merriment. Leather card cases with the crest of the sorority raised upon them were given as favors.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schneider and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Taber, Jr., were the chaperones. The out-of-town guests included the Misses Margaret and Gertrude Erbe of Green Bay, Grace Fleuger of Madison and Gertrude Luebchow of Wausau.

New York Girls
Can't Live On
Less Than $18

"A working girl cannot live on less than $18 weekly; she needs $25." As president of the association to Promote Proper Housing for Girls, Miss Cornelia E. Marshall of New York has had ample opportunity for the study which leads her to this conclusion. A recent survey of conditions surrounding nearly 1000 women wage earners brings her information up to date.

"A girl," she says, "cannot get a decent room under $7." This figure is based on testimony, not only of hundreds of working girls, but of numerous landladies as well.

COST OF FOOD

"And food," continues Miss Marshall, "costs at least $7 more."

"This leaves only $4 weekly, or a little over $200 a year, for clothing, carfare, amusements, doctors' bills, laundry and all the multitudinous other things that even the simplest living seems to require."

"The girl who makes less than $18 either is sleeping in a dark, unventilated little room or going without proper food. In either case, the result is the same—lowered vitality and diminished capacity for work."

"Save on her clothing the girl can not, for her job depends upon her neatness in dress."

The four rooming houses Miss Marshall's association maintains are entirely self supporting. She opposes "subsidized" houses, or clubs which offer a home to the working girl at less than cost, on the ground that they give employers an excuse for paying less than a living wage.

Must Watch
Little Things
To Win Success

BY MARIAN HALE

Montclair, N. J.—Hair nets, corsets, heels, veils, gloves—these are the modern business woman's creed.

Not only does it keep her in the paths of self assurance and mental peace, it leads eventually to business success.

This from Mrs. Betty Laurence, head of a brush business which through her own efforts, she has built up to national proportions.

CREED A NECESSITY

"A business woman should have a clothes creed by which she lives religiously," says Mrs. Laurence. "I have such a creed and I have never tampered with it. I am certain it has helped me in my work."

"Almost any woman smart enough to make her way in business knows how to buy a modish suit and becoming hat. But it is easy for her to be too busy to pay attention to her costume's details—the accessories."

"Nets keep the hair in order from 9 to 6. I have found them essential."

"Corsets keep the person smart and trim looking."

WATCH YOUR HEELS

"High heels have to be watched daily, low heels less often. Nothing lowers the tone of one's appearance more quickly than a run-down heel."

"Veils are more a matter of personal preference, but I prefer them. Inconspicuous in pattern and design, of course, they always should be."

"Gloves mark the lady, or they don't."

Mrs. Laurence has two little children and says home and business success are far from incompatible.

Adventures Of
The Twins

They Recover the Queen's Wand

Nancy wondered and wondered how she and Nick could get the Fairy Queen's wand from Flap-Doodle, the purple fairy, who had stolen it.

Flap-Doodle and the Twins were eating rice together out of bowls with chopsticks. The Twins had invited Flap-Doodle to have some lunch.

Suddenly Nancy thought of a plan. "That's a nice chopstick," she brought with you, Mr. Flap-Doodle," she said. "Do you care if I try it?"

Flap-Doodle didn't know what to say. He looked over to the place he had put the wand and wished he had kept it by him.

"Oh, I guess not," he said off-hand like, as though he didn't care.

So Nancy went and got the Fairy Queen's wand.

Flap-Doodle never once guessed that the little Chinese boy called Nick Oo Ting was just plain Nick, and that the little Chinese girl called Nan Soy was his twin, Nancy. So he didn't worry much.

He went on eating his rice and flapping his big ears, never noticing that Nancy was motioning to Nick behind his back.

All at once he heard Nick say: "Please, Green Shoes, take us down to the Earth to the Fairy Queen's palace."

Flap-Doodle made a jump and a grab, but he was too late. The magic wand, were already far away in the sky, traveling headlong toward the earth as fast as two little comets.

"Hopping frogs and leaping toads!" cried Flap-Doodle. "This is an outrage! I've been fooled. I'll have to get that magic wand in my power again!"

He flew after the Twins as fast as

Honeymooner's Abroad
Chapter 14 — Spoils Edna's Pleasures.

By Zoe Beckley

"A gentleman to see Monsieur Sanderson," came the clerk's voice over the telephone. "From Eureka Supply Company—you said refer all such inquiries to you."

"Tell the gentleman," said Jack, "that M. Cousins has been suddenly called away."

"He hung up and turned excitedly to Edna.

"I've trapped him—old Cousin! Told him a fake story of a business prospect, a Mr. Sanderson I'm supposed to have met on the train. Urged him to get after him at once. Well, here is the Eureka man—our rival—here first! Cousins is the only man I told the yarn to! Do you see? Do you see?"

Edna said yes, she saw, and that Cousins was a despicable creature to betray his own firm.

Jack was too excitedly triumphant to observe the wastefulness in his wife's eyes—the look that said she was trying to be patient and reasonable, but that she felt more like an orphan child at a salesman's banquet than a bride on her wedding porney.

"He—the old fish not only swallowed hook, line and sinker," went on Jack, tramping up and down, "but he's given the whole darn scheme away."

"We've been doing rotten business and the Eureka has boomed because our little European manager has been double crossing us and dragging in a pay envelope from the Eureka at the same time."

"They'll believe the story at home—but I've got to prove it."

"I'll have to jump to the other offices before Cousins gets there Berlin next. Pack the kids, kids darling, we're off for German-ee!"

Edna bit her lip. It was not so much that she minded leaving Italy before she had even seen it, but that she couldn't—not with all her love, all her charm and young sweetness push cold business from Jack's mind.

The jangle of the telephone interrupted her musing. It was Jack's friend, Jim Hart, and soon he was ushered in—a lug, breezy, easy-going American whom Europe had influenced.

After greetings and introductions Jack told him the entire situation. Hart pondered. Edna, on pretext of packing, left the room before he spoke.

"I say, Jack, don't think me a bull in," said Hart, a hand on Jack's shoulder. "But which is this—business trip or honeymoon?"

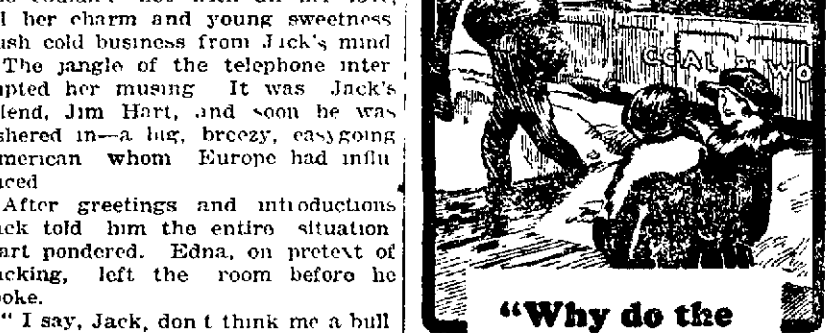

"Why—er—it's our honeymoon, but with business too—"

Jack paused, arrested at the way his ears would carry him, talking to himself every inch of the way.

They passed the Moon and Venus and Mars and Jupiter, also the star where the Weatherman lived.

"But people on the stars only said: 'There goes something.' What dropped, do you suppose?"

MARRIAGE A LA MODE

An American marries a wife. A Frenchman takes not only his wife for better or worse, but her entire kith and kin.

An American mother says, "We have lost our daughter." A French woman says, "We have gained a son."

French parents, speaking of their daughter and her husband, call them "our children." A Frenchman, speaking of his mother-in-law, says "My mother," or "Mama."

DRESS HINTS

SMOCKS FOR GIFTS

Despite the fact that smocks make the very best sort of apron for almost every conceivable occasion it is still difficult to get them in the shops. Made from gay Japanese print with white pique collar and raglan sleeves that button well about the wrist a smock will make an appreciated gift for the business girl who likes to cook dinner in her own little apartment.

DECORATIVE DEVICES

The seasons decorative devices, while they are varied, still center largely in and about beads embroidered extensively on velvet grounds. For the popular metallic cloths delicate laces combine most effectively. Street dresses are in many instances self trimmed, the trimming being put on in rolls. Dyed furs decorate the more formal dresses and also line certain of the evening wraps.

EAR RINGS

The closer style of hair dressing seems to be responsible for the present vogue for long ear rings, some almost to the shoulder. Crystal, steel and jade are used. Very large hoop ear rings are also worn.

Must Use Care To Keep Hands Soft And White

In order to keep the hands soft and white throughout the winter, especially when it is necessary to attend to some of those little household duties which are so liable to make the hands tough and red during the colder months, regular and constant care must be given to them.

As much as possible avoid exposing them to cold winds, and do not hug the fire after coming in from a walk in the cold air, and do not plunge them into very hot water after exposure to the cold. The skin becomes dried up and harsh and is more inclined to chap after the hands have been held to the fire, and the use of very hot water on cold days causes the skin to become lined and wrinkled, giving the hands an old appearance quite early in life.

REGULAR TREATMENT

No matter how rough the weather is, the hands can be kept soft and smooth if a little cream or warm oil is applied to them every night, gloves worn for all household duties, and a little oatmeal dusted over the skin after drying them.

Many women who were famous in the days of our grandfathers for their lovely hands benefited in wearing gloves on every possible occasion especially when the gloves were lined with a paste for softening and whitening the skin.

Hands that have been allowed to become red, rough and coarse-looking should be given a few weeks' treatment with a pair of paste lined gloves. To make the paste melt together one ounce of lard and half an ounce of cocoa butter, add an ounce of oil of sweet almonds, one drachm of borax and six drops of oil of bergamot. Stir all together adding sufficient fine oat meal to form a thin paste.

Take a pair of loose fitting old leather gloves, smear the inside thickly with cream and slip them on. Wear these every night for a week and there will be a most marvelous improvement in the hands.

The more often these paste-lined gloves are worn the softer and whiter the hands will become, and so, if possible, they should be slipped on during moments of leisure in the daytime as well as at night. When the gloves are removed the hands should be gently massaged for a short while, then washed in warm water, a small quantity of oatmeal being used in place of soap.

"Avoid Engine Knocks"

There is nothing more aggravating to the driver than to have his engine knock. Some motors have such a thick carbon deposit that the slightest pull will result in this annoying sound. This condition is all caused by oil leaking past the rings into the combustion chamber, where it is burnt by the ignition. REGRINDING YOUR CYLINDERS will overcome these annoyances and make your MOTOR SMOOTH Running.

Triumphs of M. Jonquille

by MELVILLE DAVISSON POST
© 1922 NEA Service Inc.

(Continued From Our Last Issue) I labored in the house in the Faubourg St. Germain for a long time and with an incredible patience, until he became the superior of any man living, and the house, as I have said, was literally packed with the most beautiful and most valuable reproductions of this character in the world. This accumulated treasure represented the incredible fortune which was before Monsieur Dillard and myself.

"It was on the night that he had gone to Bordeaux in order to make some arrangement for the removal of the treasure that the unfortunate fire occurred that wiped out our fortune in an hour, leaving Monsieur penniless and myself with but the ruin of another illusion. And it happened, Monsieur, in the simplest fashion." There was absolute silence on the terrace before the villa. The vaguely blue sea seemed to underlie a world of amethyst. Heavy odors were in the air. A little beyond the terrace the leaves of a flowering vine moved where the footman of the Princess Kitzendorf searched as noiselessly as ghosts for the lost parrot. The shadowy figures of the two footmen were outlined to the woman in the chair, and perhaps to Monsieur Jonquille, but they were not visible to the American.

He sat like a tense figure in some organic medium, grim, rigid, always in that immobility which seemed to await the next word before it flashed into the violent life as though Madame's words were the delicate implements of a vivisectionist moving about a nerve which it never touched but which it constantly menaced.

"It was the simplest accident," the woman repeated in her placid voice. "The original sketches of an immortal like one of the three which I have already named are priceless—they cannot be replaced."

"Out of the fear that the house might be entered, after the reproductions had been made, these originals were placed under some rubbish in the basement of the house."

"This basement had not been entered for a long time, and when these originals were concealed there, care was taken not to disturb the appearance which this room presented of not having been opened for an incredible age."

"It was low, with an earth floor. The ceiling was of wooden beams dried out and beginning to decay and as inflammable as tinder. The whole of this ceiling was hung with cobwebs, laced over them, hanging like veils in shreds."

"On the night of the disaster, before leaving the house, I went into this basement to make sure that the originals stored there remained as we had placed them. It was late, and I took a candle. This was a fatal indiscretion."

"When I arose from an examination of the place where the sketches were concealed, the flame of the candle came in contact with the hanging spider-webs, and immediately the whole ceiling flashed into flame. In an instant it seemed to me the entire ceiling of the room was on fire. I had barely time to escape before the room was a furnace."

CHAPTER III

"In terror, I let myself out of the flaming house," the woman continued.

"As the basement of this house was without windows, the fire was not discovered until I had gotten entirely out of the neighborhood of the Faubourg St. Germain."

"I was so overcome, so numbed by this incredible disaster that I did not stop to consider any result. I wished to escape from Paris to some place where I did not dare to take the train from the Gare de Lyon. I traveled in a motor, wind-drawn, in order to confuse anyone who might endeavor to follow."

Again she touched her mouth with the lace handkerchief. There was a faint red stain on it. She looked at the stain, but without emotion, and presently added:

"But I did not succeed. Monsieur Dillard and Monsieur Jonquille have been able to trail me here with an equal facility. It seems, and within almost the same period of time, I can not have managed my travel with discretion."

She stopped abruptly. For a moment there was silence. The two men beside her did not move, but their aspect changed. The American seemed to relax; his tense energy to ebb. The menace in him changed to an aspect of disaster; on the contrary, there came into the posture of Monsieur Jonquille a certain tenseness. He spoke, addressing the American:

"Monsieur," he said, "is it true that the basement room of this house was thus hung with cobwebs?"

The man replied as though his jaws were stiff.

"Yes," he said, "the whole rotten ceiling was hung with them, always went in with an electric flash—a candle—good God! What an accident!"

Monsieur Jonquille arose.

"Monsieur," he said, "this was no accident. I will show you."

The villa had been long closed. Insects had had their will with it. He went over to a shutter, unhooked it, swung it a little open, removed an immense cobweb, and came back to the border of the terrace.

The American, amazed and in a profound interest, moved to where he stood on the border of the terrace before the woman in the chair. The woman alone seemed beyond any concern. She neither moved nor spoke. She smiled vaguely, maintaining her posture of repose. The American could not conceal his profound interest.

"Not an accident!" he said. "What do you mean?"

Monsieur Jonquille held the web up in his fingers, struck a match, and touched the web with the flame. There was no flash. The filaments of the web shrank a little under the heat.

"I mean," said Monsieur Jonquille, "that a spider-web is not inflammable, and, therefore, the basement of this house could not have taken fire from the flame of a candle."

After that two events seemed to happen as though they were timed. The woman laughed, and the infuriated American lunged toward her, but Monsieur Jonquille's foot caught his ankle with a swift outward turn, and the man plunged headlong on the terrace. He got a heavy fall, for all the rigor of the infuriated creature was in action.

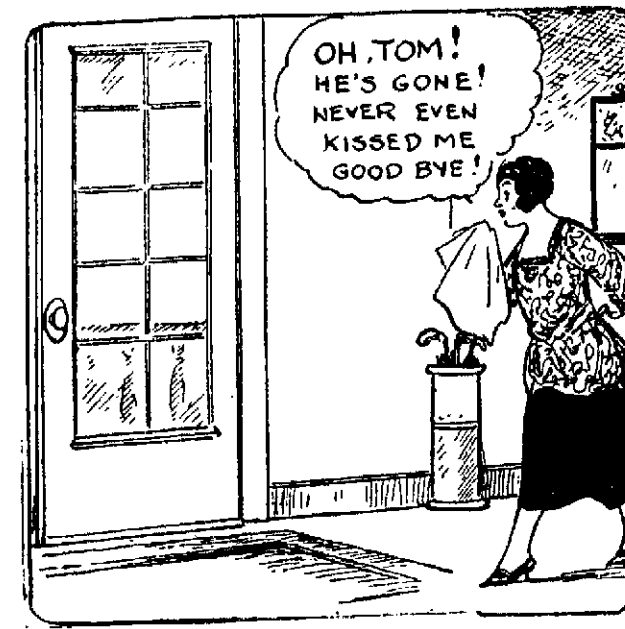

What followed seemed to attend with an equal swiftness. The two footmen of the Princess Kitzendorf were over the prostrate figure. Instantly his hands and feet were secured, a gag was in his mouth, and they had removed him.

It was like a flawless scene in a drama, rehearsed to a perfection of detail. In thirty seconds it was ended.

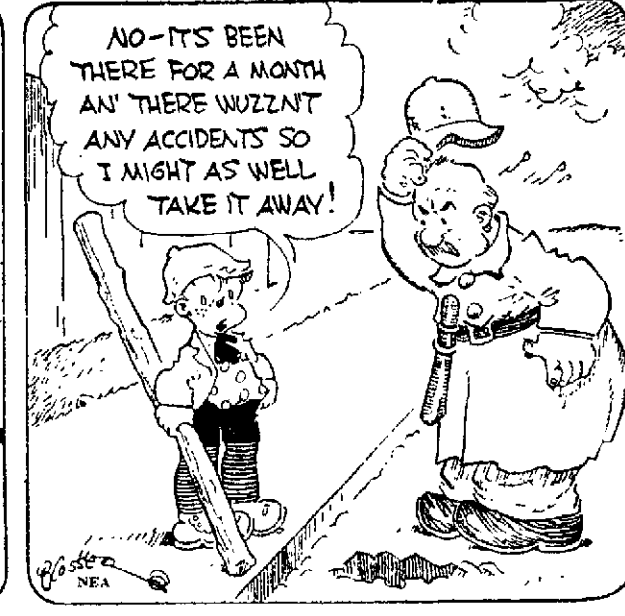

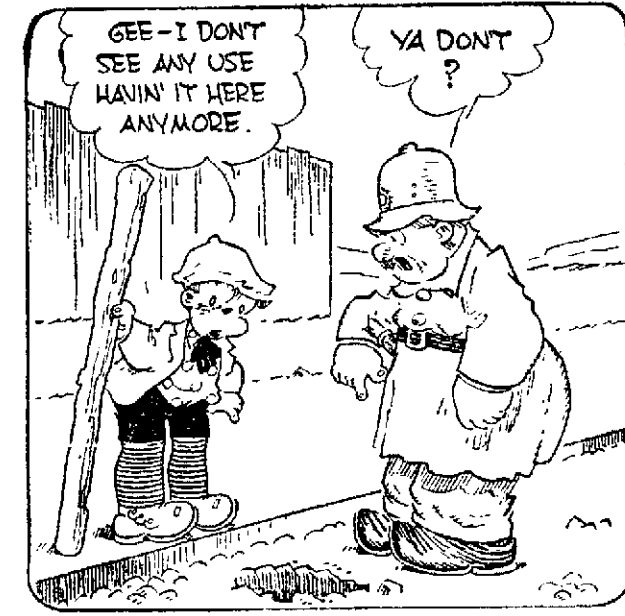

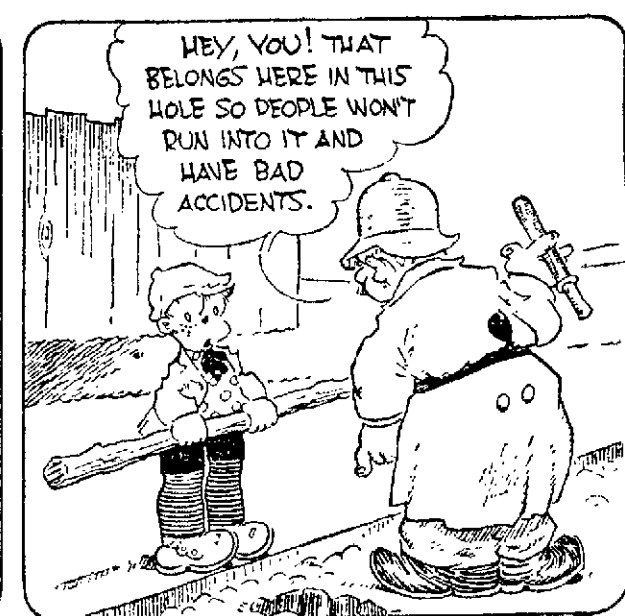

"Monsieur," said the woman in the chair, "you are very clever, and your agents are perfect."

What could be a more fitting time to select an all-state Little Five eleven than the very day the members and officials of the Little Five state conference are meeting to wind up the season's business and formulate plans for the future. The Little Five conference parley was scheduled to open Saturday in the Milwaukee Y. M. C. A.

One of the interesting features of the selection of the mythical eleven this year is the almost unanimous agreement of sport writers in the state.

AGREE ON EIGHT
Above is the Post-Crescent's selection of the state mythical teams, first and second. With the exception of Berry, Blackburn and Jerde, all other members on the first team received the unanimous vote of observers in the home towns of the schools. Beloit placed seven Lawrentians and Ripon six on their first squads.

Stoll, the husky Lawrence footballer was given a berth at left end both at Ripon and Beloit, but although Stoll played a mighty fine game, he was not as strong on the defense as Berry and the latter also did great work on the offense. Stoll played in the line and on the backfield and can be called one of the best utility men developed by Coach McChesney.

WELL MATCHED
In choosing the mythical eleven, the hardest work was in selecting the second team. Many of the men who were placed on the second team probably in the opinion of others belong on the first. As a whole, however, both eleven are fairly well matched.

Selection of the gridgers was based on both offensive and defensive work. The only player who may be termed as a "triple threat" man is McAuliffe of Beloit. McAuliffe was switched from quarter to half back by all of the experts, to make room for Kotal who, although getting a slow start, finished with so much speed that he is not only an all-state choice but also has been mentioned for the quarterback position for the Midwestern mythical eleven. McAuliffe is a really dangerous man to pass.

It is rather lamentable that not a single man from Northwestern, the other Little Five member, was able to win honorable mention. Northwestern put up its best fight against Ripon but did not have any outstanding players.

Although the season developed many stars in the Little Five there was not a single player whose performance was such as to attract national attention. "Phenoms" were scarce but there was a plentiful supply of good consistent men, who played a smooth game throughout. To go in detail about the members chosen on the mythical eleven would be only repeating of what is said about one when talking about the other.

D. Monte still holds the league's individual record of 636. He played in a bit of hard luck Friday night. He blew three, picked up two cherries and had two splits which he cleaned up. But in a 7 and 10 split he failed with the net result of 520 pins. "Bill" Groth, who is going strong, retains an average of 188 pins for the 24 games.

LAWRENCE WILL HOLD INTERCLASS CAGING TOURNNEY

Four Teams Clash Tonight In Armory—Meyer Cup
At Stake

With the Meyer basketball cup at stake, considerable rivalry is existing among classes as Lawrence teams prepared to clash Saturday night in the first games of the interclass caging tournament in the Armory.

Class spirit was given full play on Friday at a meeting in student chapel. Cheer leaders led each of the classes while teams wound up the day with practice. Workouts were on tap Saturday.

FIRST GAME 7:15
The first game will be played between the Freshmen and Sophomores, and the second between the Juniors and Seniors. Playing will start at 7:15.

The Freshman class will enter a strong team in the tourney, and Coach McChesney will be able to look over the new men, among whom are Grover, Racine high school star; Kotal of football fame; Curry, Smith and a host of other promising material.

Christoph, a sophomore, who entered school last semester will be eligible for varsity; he is a former Neenah high school star.

The varsity squad is practicing daily in the armory, where all games are to be played this year. Prospects for a championship team never were brighter at Lawrence than this year. Seven men from last year's squad are intact, and with the new material, Lawrence should be in championship form from the start.

THE LINEUPS
Following are the probable lineups for the interclass tourney:

Freshman—Grover, Kotal, Smith, Curry and Zussman.

Sophomore—Christoph, Boehm, Sund, Walker, Kubitz, Collings and Jackard.

Juniors—Cooke, Gehardt, Olson, Hulbert, Holmes, McGowan and Blackburn.

Seniors—G. Kubitz, Smith, Collins, Puchner, Mitchell, Basing, Worwick, Wright and Reuber.

Both Hill and Osman are content to go on the mat one Tuesday night on the basis of winner take all the game. Because of the great battle put up in their first meeting, the grapplers are expected to draw a crowd which will make the gate worth working for.

RESUME WORK MONDAY ON NEW HERRMANN GARAGE

Work on the new garage of Herrmann Motor Car Co. on Superior street, which was temporarily suspended two weeks ago by a delay in securing structural iron and by delay in getting plans back from Madison, where they had been submitted to state officials, will be resumed Monday.

The walls are now up to the second story, with another story to be built. Work upon the structure will be rushed as rapidly as possible in order to permit the old armory, the company's present quarters to be torn down to make room for the new Masonic temple.

JAWSON AND LUKES BATTLE TO DRAW

Oshkosh — Joe Jawson and Tony Lukes, both of Milwaukee, staged a little royal before a capacity audience in the armory here Friday night. The scrappers fought ten rounds to a draw although Jawson at times out-punched Tony.

Joe Lang of Oshkosh, fighting at 131 pounds, showed some class and had the fans riled when he led all the way in the eighth round argument with Eddie Mozart of St. Paul. Lang baffled away until he had Mozart all too groggy toward the end.

Three four-round prelims furnished additional excitement. Referee Duffy halted the scrap between Earl Westphal and Jack Collins after Collins kissed the canvas in the third stanza to the count of nine. Battling Herb defeated Phil Stosh in four rounds. Jack Murray shadowed Eddie Warner in four rounds. All judges in the preliminaries were from Oshkosh.

GREEN BAY BASKETEERS TAKE GAME FROM SEYMOUR

Seymour — Outclassed and out-weighted, Seymour high school five lost its contest to the Green Bay high school basketball team by a score of 20 to 12. Green Bay got good start and at the end of the first half led 12 to 6. Seymour got its next six points at the start of the second period but later Green Bay took the ball and shot in its other baskets.

Seymour had the ball often but was unable to make the baskets. In a preliminary game the Sophomores were beaten by the Freshmen, 11 to 10. The game between the Seymour high school girls and the Green Bay high school girls was not played because of the failure of the Green Bay girls to make an appearance.

PEA GROWERS ORGANIZE
Oshkosh — Farmers of the county growing peas for the canneries are organizing with the idea of securing more favorable contracts for next year's crop and a better grade of seed. They claim many lost money on last season's crop and that the time for cutting controlled by the canneries interfered with the harvesting of hay and other crops.

Loses Fingers
Charles Heintz, who is employed in a papermill at Peshtigo, lost the fingers of his right hand a short time ago by getting them caught in the machinery. At present he is visiting Appleton friends.

LEGION OFFICERS REELECT MARSTON EXECUTIVE HEAD

New Committee Will Push Membership Drive—Dame Is Purchaser

Joseph L. Marston was reelected chairman of the executive committee of the American Legion at a meeting of that body following a dinner in the French room of the Sherman house Friday evening. The gathering was attended jointly by the incumbent executive committee and the newly elected body, with election occurring after adjournment sine die of the old officers.

George Dame, an executive committee member, was named purchasing agent to succeed Henry J. Pettigrew, the new commander of the post. The resignation of Mr. Marston as employment officer was accepted but his successor has not been named.

PUSH MEMBERSHIP

An organization will be perfected at once for the annual membership drive with the intention of starting the canvass of veterans within a week or ten days. This project was made a duty of the executive committee by motion of the retiring officers and Commander Pettigrew was empowered to appoint a suitable campaign chairman and a corps of assistants. An effort will be made to attain a membership well over the 600 mark in line with the state department's policy of increasing its roll from 25,000 to 40,000 this year. Renewal blanks are to be mailed all members at once.

Announcement was made of a new paper which will be issued regularly beginning Jan. 1 by the Wisconsin department of the American Legion. It will be sent to each member of local posts and is included in the present annual dues of $3.

RESTRICT GRAVE MARKERS

One of the acts of the retiring committee was adoption of a resolution that no markers except those supplied officially by the government be permitted on the legion burial plot in Riverside and St. Joseph cemeteries when soldier bodies are buried there. The motion permits also of the use of any emblem the American Legion may designate. It is the hope of the post that a suitable soldier monument may grace this spot sometime in the near future, and any money which families of the deceased veterans would have appropriated for individual monuments will be devoted to this purpose if presented to the legion.

The Rev. Harry S. Ruth of Ashland, historian of the Wisconsin department of the legion was a guest of the officers at the dinner and gave a short talk urging the compilation of a complete history of war activities of the city and county, both with respect to soldiers overseas and organizations at home. He urged also the platting of all cemeteries in the county, with the graves of veterans of all wars designated. The Rev. Mr. Ruth is the guest of Leon C. Dickson during his stay here.

The executive committee voted to hold its next regular meeting on Wednesday, Jan. 3, at which time standing committees for the year will be nominated.

STATE TO ELECT JUDGES IN SPRING

Voters Will Ballot On Successor To Crownhart, Blaine Appointee

Notices for the election of judges throughout the state at the 1923 spring election are being prepared in the office of the secretary of state and will be mailed to the county clerk about the first of the year.

One supreme court judge is to be elected for the term beginning Jan. 1, 1924. The term which expires on that date is that of the late Chief Justice R. G. Smedley, who Justice Charles H. Crownhart is completing by appointment of Gov. John J. Blaine. It is expected Justice Crownhart will be a candidate for the full term.

Circuit judges whose terms will expire Jan. 1, 1924, are Lawrence W. Halsey, Oscar M. Fritz and Walter Scholz of the various branches of the second circuit; Milwaukee; Charles M. Davidson, thirteenth circuit; G. N. Risford, fifteenth circuit; Chester A. Fowler, eighteenth circuit; and William B. Quinlin, 31st circuit.

SHIFT FLAGMEN AT RAIL CROSSINGS

Several changes among local flagmen of the Northwestern Railway Co. have just been made. Christian Langard of Escanaba, Mich., who has been in charge of North Division crossing since the retirement of Michael Good Nov. 1, has been succeeded by Edward Thomas, who was transferred from Onondaga crossing.

Martin Zurkowski, who has been in North Dakota for several weeks, succeeds Herman Lapel at Appleton crossing, the latter having been transferred to Onondaga. The changes are in the nature of promotions. Mr. Langard, held the North Division crossing position temporarily after arrival from Escanaba.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS WILL MEET

Skating Rink Policy And Reduction In Board Personnel To Be Taken Up

A special meeting of the Appleton board of public works has been called by Mayor Henry Reuter to take place Monday evening in the city hall. Inasmuch as this is also the date of the monthly forum meeting of the chamber of commerce at which Dan Weigle is to speak and a movie on city zoning is to be shown, the meeting of the board of public works will take place immediately after the forum banquet.

Several matters are to be brought to the attention of the board. A request of certain persons for the use of the city ice rinks for a few Sunday days in January for skating events will be considered. At the same time a policy will be discussed for disposing of emergency matters in the future such as the petition mentioned. The matter of reducing the membership of the board also will be discussed. The board until this year consisted of but five members, most of whom have offices in the city hall. They were the mayor, city attorney, city engineer, chairman of the street and bridges committee and chairman of the finance committee. Last spring the common council added enough members so as to have representation in every ward.

ON THE SCREEN

There's a little bit of Paradise for the fair sex on its way here, so Manager Duffy, of the Elite theatre declares. It will come in the form of celluloid, encased in an ordinary tin box, but it will suffice to set the ladies dizzy with delight, he avers.

This particular slice of joy to the feminine heart bears the significant title of "Rich Men's Wives," and it is a Preferred Picture, produced by Gansler, who gave to the screen the exotic production, "Kismet." A host of beauties appears in the picture—Claire Windsor, Rosemary Theby, Myrtle Steedman, Mildred June and Carol Holloway—and all but Miss Holloway wear gowns that will make the aforesaid feminine heart palpitate in ecstatic excitement. Miss Windsor wears no less than six different costumes, beginning with a chic tailored suit and ending with a beautiful dancing frock. In between she is seen in a riding habit, in evening gown, in a smart sports suit.

A smart afternoon gown, picture hat, and a stunning evening costume fall to the lot of Miss Theby, while Miss Steedman and Miss June both are seen in the very latest street and party models.

All of which calls to mind the fact that the ladies no longer look to the stage for sartorial inspiration and guidance, but gaze screenward for them. This phase of the motion picture is not the least of the reasons why they are so popular with the fair ones. It may be said Women go to the "movies" as much to see the new fashions as to see the pictures, a fact that is evidenced by the prolific use of screen stars in the illustration of the better class of fashion publications.

Manager Duffy says that aside from the gowning of the women stars, "Rich Men's Wives" is a notable production, with a story exceptionally strong in its pathos and dramatic values. It will have its first presentation at the Elite theatre next Tuesday, and will be shown 2 days.

BOSS OF CAMP FOUR

Dynamite and Charles Jones—that is descriptive of the swift action in the Fox production, "Boss of Camp Four," which begins a two day run at the Elite Theatre, starting tomorrow. The finish of the screen offering shows Jones touching off a powder charge that blows up an entire mountainside. The story, dealing with the construction of a road, is a series of thrilling scenes, one more startling than the other.

There is adventure and romance, just enough to give quickened interest to the tale. There is also a plangent tinge of comedy. Playing opposite Jones is a glorious girl, "Fritzi Brunette's charm adds much to the virile performance given by Jones," to quote from the latest reports.

Everyone who enjoys a story of the outdoors with its natural scenic beauty, should find much entertainment in the film coming to the Elite Theatre. Looking back at the successes scored by Charles Jones, notable among them his work in "The Fast Mail," it does not seem amiss to expect the highest standard of screen acting of the type that Jones portrays so interestingly.

BEAR CREEK HIGH SCHOOL WINS FROM MARION QUINT

Bear Creek—Bear Creek high school basketballers took the Marion quintet in camp to the tune of 12 to 11. The tilt was hard fought with the game anyone's until the final whistle blew. The Bear Creek players were Wallace Schoepke, center; Ormond Prunty and Theodore Reinke, guards; Roy Mullarkey and Roland Armstrong, forwards. Perry Nolan replaced Reinke when the latter injured his head.

CITY DADS TO SEE ZONING MOVIE AT C. OF C. BANQUET

Directors Of Chamber Also Plan 100 Per Cent Turnout To Hear Weigle

Mayor Henry Reuter, aldermen, members of the city planning commission and other city officials have been invited by the chamber of commerce to attend the monthly forum dinner at 6:15 Monday evening in the Venetian room of the Sherman house.

This was done because of the showing of the motion picture "Growing Pains," in connection with the meeting. The film is issued by the American City Bureau, New York, and deals with the subject of zoning. It is believed to be one of the simplest expositions of the zoning movement and will be of help in deciding on the proposed ordinance here.

Directors of the chamber of commerce voted at their meeting Thursday to attend in a body also. The aim is to have all present to see the motion picture and especially to hear the address of Dan E. Weigle, St. Paul, noted community promoter.

With reservations already in the dinner, Secretary Hugh G. Corbett says only about 50 more can be accommodated and the first to respond will be the ones admitted. Any person in Appleton, whether a member of the chamber or not, is welcome, he says. Among the reservations from other cities is a request for ten plates from New London.

An automobile driven by E. M. Coffey, salesman for Morgan Co. of Oshkosh, was damaged on Little Chute hill Friday by coming in contact with a telephone pole. The accident was due to skidding, the automobile having completely turned about by the time it reached the bottom of the hill. The driver escaped injury.

Much Building In 1923
With Possible Decline In
Rents, View Of Babson

Increase In Prices Will Cut Off
Impending Boom In Erection Of Homes, Firms Are Warned
—1922 a Record Year

Wellesley Hills, Mass.—There has been much discussion of late as to whether the building boom has spent itself. Roger W. Babson evidently doesn't think it has. In commenting on the building outlook he calls attention to several bullish factors.

"New building," says Mr. Babson, "is the outstanding feature of our business recovery. It is what started us on the road to better business. Never before in the history of the country have so many new houses been built as in the first ten months of 1922. For every house that was built in 1921, two have been built this year. Last year 27 northeastern states of the country spent $68,000,000 for houses; this year we have already spent $1,098,000,000, and when the going rings on Dec. 31, the total will very likely show 100 per cent more than in 1921.

TOTALS $5,000,000,000
"This building revival is not confined to houses either. House building has been the most spectacular, but we have also built many more offices, factories, schools, hospitals, churches, amusement halls, public roads, bridges, reservoirs, memorials. In fact, all kinds of construction. Where as our normal building total is about $2,000,000,000, three end of this year, we shall have built to the extent of $5,000,000,000.

When asked if he did not think that we have already overdone this building boom, Mr. Babson replied:

"I do not think so. I look for continued building activity, both in residential and business building for the greater part of 1923. Beyond that time, I expect a decline. A survey just made by the National Association of Real Estate Boards shows that out of a total of 154 cities surveyed over the country, 121 cities still report a housing shortage. Of the remaining 33 cities, 53 report no shortage and only 10 a moderate shortage. This study corroborates my opinion that there is still much residential building to be done, although the peak may have been passed."

RENTS MAY DECLINE
"What about rents?" Mr. Babson was asked.

"High rents have probably passed their peak. The long swing will be downward. Here again it is a question of supply and demand. The coming decline in rents will not be abrupt, at least, not until this building boom has supplied more of the short age. Rental advances for the present are slightly more numerous than declines, but in the majority of cities, there is no movement either up or down. Gradually of course the trend will turn downward as the demand is more fully supplied. Industrial and business rents show surprising stiffness due to business recovery, but these do not indicate any long continued advance.
"I am particularly optimistic with regard to suburban building development. The boom in city building will probably not last more than a year, but suburban building is different. Auto traffic is congested in the big cities that shoppers had rather trade in suburban stores than drive into the heart of our great cities. City dwellers are looking for homes in the

TO REBUILD PARTY
KELLER DECLARES

Lauds Sheboygan In Address
There For Forming Jefferson Club

In an address before the Thomas Jefferson league of Sheboygan, Gustave Keller of Appleton said organization of a Democratic club is a big thing in political progress. Democrats cannot hope to make the party an instrument of service until they are organized, he said.

"There must be a campaign of education before construction," he declared. "I mean that as we suffered serious reverses in the last presidential campaign, we must reconstruct and build up our organization again. We must educate the people in the principles of our party that were handed down by its founders."

NEED PARTIES

"We need political parties in this country. They are necessary to the form of government under which we live. From the very outset political parties formed in the United States. As soon as the two great minds of Washington's cabinet, Jefferson and Hamilton developed a division of opinion as to principles of government resulted. That same difference exists to day between the two great parties."

"Hamilton was the real founder of

HENRY BROWN ELECTED

Henry Brown was elected president of the Equitable Fraternal union at its regular meeting Friday evening. Other officers are: Vice president, Mrs. Lucina Chandler; advisor, Mrs. R. R. Rader; warden, Mrs. M. J. O'Connor; secretary, M. J. O'Connor; treasurer, Maurice Gehin; inner guard, Peter Rast; outer guard, Louis Krause; past president, H. Fiedler; trustee, Mrs. A. Tietz; musician, Mabel Younger.

The Republican party, Jefferson of the Democratic party. As a matter of fact, the Democratic party was called the Republican party in those days and the Republican the Federalist, but the fact remains that the parties of Jefferson and of Hamilton are the Democrat and Republican parties of today regardless of the names.

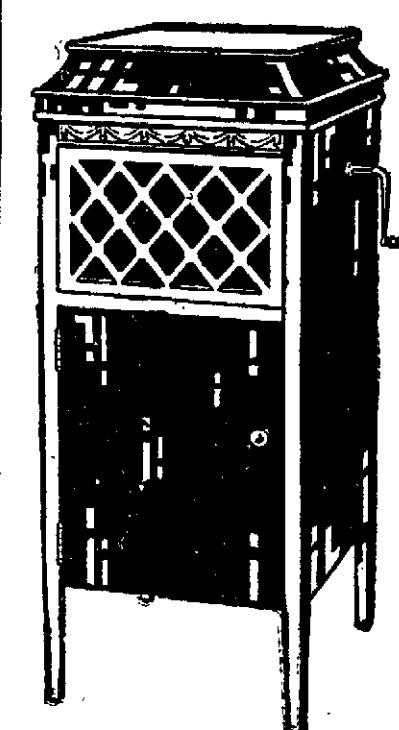

"The best distinction I ever heard as between the principles of the two great parties was made by William Jennings Bryan. He said Hamilton wanted government from the top, Jefferson from the bottom. Hamilton thought there should be special qualifications for participation in government; Jefferson that every man is competent to take part in government, to have a voice, suffrage."

Christmas Tree
Horde Expected
To Strip Swamps

The weather and the roads permitting, Sunday will be another day for automobile excursions to the swamps and woods in search of Christmas trees. Evergreen trees that pass for Christmas trees are fir, balsam, spruce and in some homes, even pines. But not all of these are available in this region. The mild weather of last Sunday drew many automobilists to the swamps, but they found that Christmas trees are not so plentiful here as they were a few years ago.
